16:00 – 17:00

The Collegium Academicum is a cooperative housing project in Heidelberg-Rohrbach developed and owned by students and young people in professional training. With 176 inhabitants (with 74 more to come) it is one of the biggest housing projects in Germany, with the goal to enable solidary lifestyles and socialize living space to develop alternatives outside of a capitalistic housing market. We visit the project, learn more about its social organization and architecture as well as the developing process. Afterwards, we optionally can have an exchange about our thoughts about the project and similar initiatives as a social innovation for socio-ecological transformation.
