New course HGGS – Marsilius-Kolleg: “Academic Freedom”

The HGGS is pleased to announce a new course offered in collaboration with the Marsilius-Kolleg. With the contribution of three professors from different fields (Early History, Law, Plant Sciences), you will be able to discuss the concept of “academic freedom” in a highly interdisciplinary context. The course starts on 29 January 2021, but you can sign up now by emailing Prof. Meier (see below) as spaces are limited.

This is an optional course in the HGGS Curriculum, but it fulfils the requirements of one of the two interdisciplinary seminars you will take during your HGGS membership.

»Academic Freedom«

Prof. Dr. Thomas Meier, Heidelberg Center for the Environment/Ur- und Frühgeschichte

Prof. Dr. Ute Mager, Law

Prof. Dr. Thomas Rausch, Plant Molecular Physiology

In times of global pressure on universities the principle of academic freedom is fiercely debated within and outside academia. But surprisingly few academics and even less students have fundamental knowledge what academic freedom is – and what it is not. Debates and actions are often driven by emotions and subjective feelings about a “proper university” instead of well-founded information.

In this course we will

- I. discuss the principle of academic freedom – its history, its juridical status and its formal applicability
- II. learn to discern academic freedom and other civil liberties (e.g. open speech, freedom of opinion)
- III. understand the complexity of taking action in the face of violations to academic freedom
- IV. sharpen our awareness for threats to academic freedom in our own societies.

The course material is in English and discussions will be a mixture of English and German (summaries in English will be possible). We expect engagement and interest – no marks will be given!
