We all have a story to tell:

Creative writing workshop

Cristian Camilo Cuervo
Philologist and writer

Have you ever wanted to tell a story but have not dared to write it because you have no literary training? Do you have an idea for a poem, a short story, maybe a novel, flitting through your mind, but have not yet found the way to bring it to life? Are you afraid of that blank sheet of paper waiting in front of you?

Writing is always a demanding task, whether it is an academic text or a literary work. This workshop on creative writing is aimed at encouraging participants to write literary texts, even if they are not familiar with them (in fact, the less acquainted with literature, the better!).

The workshop is entirely dynamic, lasts 120 minutes and includes oral exchange, recommendations to successfully start—or continue—writing, as well as a practical exercise of literary production in situ. The final reflection is that if you can create your own masterpiece under the challenging conditions of this workshop, once it is finished, you will have the tools to write anything you want, whenever you want!

Who? Students, teaching staff and administrative staff of the university. (open to anyone interested depending on available places).

When? Tuesday, 28 May 2024, 10:00 am

Where? Kettengasse 12, Anglistisches Seminar, Room 108

How? Free of charge, Just bring your pen and eagerness!

Language: English

Please register with your name and faculty by writing to:

cccuerovf@unal.edu.co